Ottawa, Oct. 10.—J. S. Hall, ex-treasurer of Quebec, is here to-day. It is not thought he will take it. In that event Col. Butler or Christopher Carter will receive the appointment.

NANAIMO NEWS.

Annual Meeting of the Reform Club This Month.

Nanaimo, Oct. 10.—Two young men, Thompson and Grey, have had to suffer much inconvenience through their little escapade with a Chinaman. The case has been completed in the police court after many adjournments and the magistrates have reserved their decision for one week. The youths have had a good lesson so that it is expected the judgment will not be a severe one.

Mr. W. E. Webb will leave to-morrow morning under the guidance of Chris Jacobson for Powell Lake, where they hope to ascertain news of the Allen brothers. Should they fail to find them after searching for a week they will return to the city and organize a larger party to search the surrounding country.

A hundred yards dash between two popular store keepers is the topic among the sports. The event comes off on Saturday night and as both men are very heavy, the race promises to be very interesting. Smith concedes Mason ten yards start and feels confident of winning.

Ald. Nightingale will introduce a by-law to raise $10,500 for the purpose of filling in Commercial street inlet in place of the present wooden bridge. It is expected the by-law will meet with little opposition.

REBELLION IN EQUADOR.

The Rebels of 1885 Takng a Prominent Part.

New York, Oct. 10.—A special from Panama to the Herald says: An insurrection has broken out at Calimes, Equador. Senor Trivino, who took a prominent part in the revolution of 1885, heads the rebels, and troops have been sent from Quito to quell the uprising. The relations between Hayti and San Domingo are again strained and President Honreaux is reinforcing his frontier guards. Smallpox is epidemic in Porto Rico.

GOODWIN'S RELEASE.

Brigadier-General Otis Comments on the Finding.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10.—Brigadier-General Otis has rebuked the officers of a court martial at Vancouver barracks, Washington, who tried Captain William P. Goodwin, 14th infantry, on the charge of drunkenness on duty. The court sustained Captain Goodwin in his plea of "Not guilty." General Otis, in an official comment which is published for circulation in the army, restores Captain Goodwin to duty, and says: "The evidence presented by the prosecution appears to establish beyond reasonable doubt the truth of the allegations of guilt charged as committed on the 21st and 24th days of July. The two lieutenants of Captain Goodwin's command at the time officers of high standing, of long association with, and most reluctant witnesses against him at the proceedings testified positively to the intoxication of the accused as set out in the first specification and this direct evidence remains unshaken by the sworn statements."

DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

New York, Oct. 10.—George O. Jones, who was head of the Greenback party before the Prohibitionists and Populists stole away its political prestige, has lived a very retired life in this city for the past seven or eight years. In the city directory he is described as a publisher of No. 17 East 59th street. Mr. Jones was walking along 80th street, near Columbus avenue, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he was attacked by two highwaymen. While one of them grappled with him, the other grabbed his silver watch and made off with it. Mr. Jones has had too much experience on the platform to be at a loss to make himself heard on any occasion and his shouts attracted the attention of Sergeant Townsend of the 68th street police station. Mr. Jones gave chase to the thieves as he shouted. They ran towards the boulevard and turned up that thoroughfare. Sergeant Townsend found that he was being out-distanced, and jumped into an express wagon that was standing in front of a store and without waiting to make an explanation to the driver who stood on the sidewalk, whipped up the horses and went in pursuit. After a chase of half a dozen blocks, one of the men was caught. He was taken to the police station, where he gave his name as Henry Hennessy, 29 years old. He is said to be known in the precinct as an old crook. The other man escaped, but later in the evening was caught by men sent out by Sergeant Townsend. He gave his name as Arthur Sheridan, but refused to tell where he lived or give any further information about himself. Mr. Jones was not injured by the encounter. When the Sergeant seized the express wagon Mr. Jones was left far behind in the chase but he called at the police station later to claim his property which was found on the thief.

London, Oct. 10.—A dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Yokohama says the Japanese government has decided to raise an international war loan of ten million pounds which together with the new taxation for war purposes will bring the resources of the government up to sixteen million pounds. The minority in the cabinet favored a foreign loan owing to the recency of the last international loan.

It is stated that China has asked Germany to use her good offices with a view of terminating the war between China and Japan.

ROYAL CITY EXHIBITION.

New Westminster's Fair Opened at Noon To-Day by Lieut. Governor Dewdney.

Fine Weather and a Large Attendance—Victoria Canoe Men Successful.

New Westminster, Oct. 10.—The exhibition and celebration was opened today in beautiful weather. It far exceeds past shows in both merit and the number of exhibits which are over 4000. The attendance is also larger than ever. The formal opening took place at noon by Lieutenant-Governor Dewdney. A special train bringing 1400 school children from Vancouver was one of the leading features. The celebration sports are in full swing. In the canoe regatta the Victoria men came nearly sweeping everything. Askew took the amateur single, and Askew and Macaulay the amateur tandem and the Victoria crew the fours with single blades. The boat vs. canoe race was won by Kennedy, Westminster, in a boat. The sailing races were postponed till to-morrow as there was no wind.

BUILDING COLLAPSES.

Several Adjoining Houses Crushed, Killing the Inmates.

New York, Oct. 10.—At 2:30 o'clock this morning Walls' six-story factory building in course of erection at 74 Monroe street, fell during a heavy wind and rain storm. The walls of the factory building crushed in the roof of a three-story dwelling house and killed four persons. All the bodies have been recovered. Six others were injured. The falling walls also crushed a tiny brick tenement, and a rear extension to the tenement, both adjoining the factory. There were some thirty persons in all in the crushed structures. Calls for the fire department and ambulances were sent out, and in short order the engines and ambulances were at the scene. The work of extricating the unfortunates began, a school house near by being turned into a temporary hospital. Under the strong exertions of the firemen a score of the injured were soon recovered. Several persons buried in the ruins, whom the firemen were able to reach but unable to extricate, were given stimulants from time to time, until they were finally dug out. At half-past seven, there were only two in the ruins. One of the two people imprisoned was found to be dead.

NEW YORK'S POLICE.

Handsome Sums Were Paid Officers for Protection.

New York, Oct. 10.—The first witness before the Lexow committee was Kaufmann, a salesman. Kaufmann heard Officer Corcoran say that two witnesses, who testified against him were dead as a door nail and that he would lay for them some night. Patrick Kelly testified that one night a few weeks ago he had gone to a tin wedding and had fallen asleep on a door step. He was awakened by feeling a policeman's hand in his pocket and missed 50 cents. He accused the officer of taking it. Several days afterwards the policeman (Schroeder) beat him unmercifully and arrested him and he was fined $5 by Justice Burke. Vernon H. Brown, agent of the Cunard line said that the company had paid the police $10 a week since he was agent and was still paying. Wm. Jamoune, of Roseville, N. J., said he had been robbed of property valued at $1000. It had been located in pawn shops and he had paid Detective O'Connor $250 for its recovery.

FRED TURNER STABBED.

One of Westminster's Promising Young Men Stabbed by a Woman.

New Westminster, Oct. 10.—The stabbing of F. G. Turner here last night by his mistress, Gracie Irving, has caused a great sensation owing to the high business and social position occupied by the young man. Some six months ago he formed the acquaintance in Victoria of a young woman of the demi-monde just from San Francisco. He became infatuated with her and brought her here. A little later he sent her to his farm six miles from the city, and spent every Sunday there with her until a short time back when becoming tired of the toy he tried to shake her off. She did not want to go but he insisted and then Gracie determined on revenge. Yesterday she cam to town and had an unsatisfactory interview with Turner. Last evening she returned to his office and almost in the presence of a third party drew a dirk which she bought only a few minutes before, and stabbed Turner in the abdomen as he was sitting in a chair at his desk. She was instantly arrested and a doctor summoned to Turner's assistance. The injured man was conveyed to St. Mary's Hospital. It is feared the wound will prove fatal.

EUROPEAN GOSSIP.

The Thunderer Expresses an Opinion on Wheat Growing in America.

Anti-Jewish Party Scores a Victory in Hungary—The Czar's Condition.

London, Oct. 9.—The Times in a leader discussing the condition of wheat growing in America, as reported by the agricultural board, says the American farmer must endeavor to raise prices or abandon wheat growing. American railroads and steamers will some day cease to carry his wheat for almost nothing. It is reasonable to regard the present price of wheat as eccentric, transient, phenomenal. The return of prices to the recent level will be assisted by the abundance of gold promised by new discoveries.

The bill concerning the rights of Jews was rejected in the Hungarian house by a vote of 109 to 103. As the bill was thrown out there will be no special debate on it. The excitement following the announcement of the vote was so keen that it was necessary to suspend the sitting. The Lutheran clergy were absent from the house. The Catholics present indignantly repudiated the clause admitting the possibility of Christians becoming Jews. Baron Eoetvoes, minister of education, appealed to the house to grant justice to the Jews. It was quite possible, he said, that many Jews might become Catholics. Court Marshal Szecsen, a notoriously intolerant man, led the reactionist clericals in the attack on the bill. The magnates adopted the bill dealing with the religion of the offspring of mixed marriages. The clauses will be debated to-morrow.

The several anti-Semitic groups of the German empire have decided through their delegates in conference at Eisenach to combine under the name of the "German Social Reform Party." The extreme tendencies of the conference were shown by the heartiness with which it received ex-Rector Ahlwardt, the most unscrupulous and blatant Jew baiter in Germany.

The Morning Post says: Englishmen will not soon forget that it was O. W. Holmes' head that prompted the hand which wrote some of the most fervent words in which this country was ever apostrophized.

In addressing the Liberals of Louth Shaw Lefevre, president of the local government board, said that the general election could not be postponed long. It would certainly be held before the end of another year.

The Morning Post has a dispatch from Buenos Ayres reporting that Jabez Spencer Balfour, who wrecked the Liberator building society, escaped from Salta on August 18, and is supposed to be in the Netherlands.

John Redmond, leader of the Parnellites, presided over a large meeting in the rotunda in Dublin. He denounced the government for accepting with equanimity the decision of the house of lords against home rule and for removing home rule from the category of urgent questions. If the agitation to abolish the house of lords be interposed now, he said, home rule would be relegated to the background for a generation. The abolition of the right of entail would be the greatest revolution in English history. The meeting passed a resolution to the effect that everything possible should be done to force the immediate dissolution of parliament and obtain from the electors a fresh mandate as to home rule.

A dispatch from Rome to the Central News says that the majority of the Piedmont deputies, led by Tomaso Villa, have declared their purpose to support the government henceforth in the chamber. Their action will greatly strengthen Crispi and will reduce the following of Zenardelli and Giolitti to about forty. The immediate cause of the secession is Zenardelli's alliance with the socialists and the indictment of Giolitti.

Fire started yesterday in the buildings on the exhibition grounds known as "Old Antwerp," in Antwerp, and for a time the destruction of the entire group was threatened. The flames were extinguished after a block of seven houses were burned. The greater part of the "Old Antwerp" buildings were saved, but only by the most heroic efforts of the fire brigade.

The minister of the Spanish colonies has resigned his office and many of his colleagues are expected to retire within a week. It is assumed that the minister's resignation is due to the trouble in Cuba and Porto Rico, notably in the latter, where the autonomist movement is very strong.

The Schlessische Zeitung's correspondent in St. Petersburg says the condition of the czar has suddenly changed for the worse and that the higher officials and court dignitaries have started hurriedly for Livadia.

The Neu Wiener Tageblatt says that the czar's mental depression has been evident to all who have approached him in the last few days.

A report is in circulation that if the czar decides upon a form of regency while he is absent from Russia, which it is expected he will be, he will make a special declaration entrusting the czarewitch with the direction of state affairs, the title of regent not being mentioned. It is understood, however, that the czarewitch's jurisdiction will be limited and that the czar will reserve to himself the right of decision in important matters.

The Freisinnige Zeitung of Berlin says: We are drifting into a customs war with America. If the German Adrians succeed in getting Chancellor von Caprivi on their side and the United States refuses to modify the sugar tariff, reprisals by Germany will mean an increase of the grain duty from 35 to 40 marks. Counter reprisals by the United States will follow, which will damage German commerce ten ties more than did the Russian tariff war.

The excitement over the recent consecration of the Protestant Bishop of Madrid is increasing. The Papal Nuncio's letter supporting Cardinal Monescillo's protest against the consecration has added fuel to the fire. The Liberal newspapers defend the consecration and plead for tolerance. They attack the Papal Nuncio for meddling as a diplomat in the domestic affairs of Spain, and suggest that the government hand him his passports.

DISPLEASED THE WOMEN.

Cardinal Gibbons Says Home Is Their Sphere.

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—The sermon of Cardinal Gibbons at the cathedral yesterday was addressed particularly to the women and last night the cardinal took occasion to express his views on woman suffrage. He said in part:

"To-day we honor the queen of saints, the Virgin Mary. I think the dispassionate student of history will acknowledge that woman is indebted to the example of Mary for her elevated position in social and domestic life. The church declares that woman is the equal and the peer of man. Almighty God in His distribution of his gifts makes no distinction on account of race, previous condition or sex. The proper sphere of woman is in the home, and the more influence she gains in public life the more she will lose in private life. While the men are the sovereigns of the country, their wives command them, and therefore exercise a controlling power. Above all things take care of your homes."

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Dr. Julie Holmes Smith, Democratic nominee for trustee for the Illinois state university, in an interview to-day on Cardinal Gibbons' attack on woman suffrage, said: "In support of his idea the cardinal recites the words of a Grecian ruler: 'I command Athens, Athens rules the world, and my wife rules me; therefore she rules the world.' Perhaps had the cardinal investigated his Grecian history more carefully he would have discovered that it was not the wife that ruled or governed. The man governed the wife and family at home. Thus it has been, and Cardinal Gibbons would do well to study the story of Aspasia."

ANNUAL CHURCH CONGRESS.

Meeting of English Bishops, Clergy and Laymen.

London, Oct. 9.—A dispatch from Exeter says: "The annual church congress opened here to-day, with 31 bishops of the Church of England in attendance, as well as a large number of churchmen of lower degree and prominent laymen from all parts of the country. The members of the congress were welcomed at Guildhall this morning by Mayor Edward James Domvile, after which they attended service at the cathedral, where Right Rev. Frederick Temple, Bishop of London, delivered the sermon. The business sessions of the congress commenced this afternoon in Victoria Hall with the delivery of the inaugural address of Right Rev. H. Bickersteth, bishop of Exeter and the president of the congress. The president's address was followed by the reading of papers on the subjects of Bible criticism, temperance work, religious instruction in schools, the work of the country clergy and the ethics of athletics. Earl Nelson presented a paper on "The Church of England and Nonconformity." Sir Albert Rollit, president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, spoke on the subject of morals and commerce; among the other speakers were the Earl of Mount-Edgcumbe, Canon Knox Little, Sir Richard Webster, the Bishop of London, Sir Stafford Northcote, Sir B. W. Richardson, Archdeacon Farrar and Right Rev. Alfred Earle, bishop of Marlborough. The sessions of the congress will continue for four days.

INFORMERS WHIPPED.

Acts of Men Who Resented English Criticism of Lynching.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 9.—Elijah Thurston, seventy years old, with his wife and sixteen year old daughter, came to this city yesterday to escape the hands of people in their Gilmer county home, who would have killed them. Several nights ago Miss Eva Thurston was awakened by finding herself borne off from the house by four masked men. They had already carried her father out, while her mother was being held back in the house. There were about thirty men, all masked, who with stout leather thongs began beating the girl and her father, both of whom were in their night dresses. The mother broke from the house to defend her daughter, when she was lashed in their presence. Notice was then served upon them that the next visit would mean death. They were suspected of having reported an illicit still in the neighborhood.

HOW DR. HOLMES DIED.

Was Sitting in His Study When the End Came.

Boston, Oct. 9.—The residence of the late Oliver Wendell Holmes was closed to all visitors yesterday. From a nephew of Dr. Homes it was learned that the poet was sitting in his study, in his easy chair, chatting with his son, Judge Holmes, when death came upon him without a moment's notice. He died at 1:30 p.m. No one but Judge Holmes, his wife and servants were in the house. Dr. Holmes had passed a perfect summer, as far as health was concerned, and returned only a short time ago from his summer home in Beverly to his Boston street residence. He had been suffering for a week from a bad cold, and his death was unexpected by even the nearest members of his family.

M'GLYNN AND THE A. P. A.

Lively Time in a Staten Island Church.

Prohibition Park, Staten Island, Oct. 8.—Rev. Dr. McGlynn spoke before three thousand five hundred people in the auditorium here yesterday. His subject was "The A. P. A., Its Causes and Cure." He said he believed the Catholics themselves were in a degree responsible for the existence of the A. P. A., pointing to the tendency of many Catholic priests, particularly those of foreign birth, to discuss public questions with religious prejudices. He denounced the association by declaring it was founded on unpatriotic and dishonorable principles, and called on all Catholics to pay no attention to the movement. Towards the close of the address many of the audience left the hall, those that were left being mostly Catholics. When Dr. McGlynn had concluded Alfred N. Martin, who announced himself a national deputy of the A. P. A., ascended the platform and said very excitedly: "Dr. McGlynn is all wrong. The principles and teachings of the Catholic church are diametrically opposed to every American industry." The speaker got no further, for his voice was drowned by a storm of hisses. Dr. McGlynn again took the platform, and rebuked the Catholics for hissing, saying it was just such incidents as this which intensified the feeling by the A. P. A.

SHOOTING DEER AT NIGHT.

To the Editor: Believing that there is a law prohibiting the destruction of deer at night time, I take this opportunity of calling your attention to the fact that deer are shamefully shot at night time in large numbers. It is a common sight to see so called "sports," with miners' lamps on their hats in quest of deer in the vicinity of Goldstream and Sooke districts at all times after dark and hear shots fired in large numbers. The attention of the provincial police is called to this fact, and their presence would not be amiss after dark in the above districts. The offenders should be made an example of in the light of the law.

WHERE TEAKWOOD GROWS.

In the heart of untrodden jungles, or thick-wooded hillsides, leaning over the brink of precipices, where tropical creepers twist like snakes choking the life out of younger growths, where orchids flaunt aloft, and strange vines bloom, there the teakwood grows. Against its corrugated bark tigers and leopards sharpen their claws, and under its thick shade strange beasts rest by day.

That atom of animate destruction the white ant has passed it by. Other growths have reared their heads out of the jungle around it, have grown, have lived their day, have died, and rotted back to the roots which supplied them with life. In comparison man has been a midge, a mote in the sun, hunting his fellow animals with flint-headed arrows and stone axes, fitting, passing, gone; but the great oaks have grown, have spread their arms benignantly over the dust of tiny shapes beneath, and planted in dignity, have stood as emblems of strength and power in meditations lasting one, two, three, five and six hundred years. They have secreted the units of time in their hearts as a maiden hides the thoughts of her first love. Days have come as thick as the snows that crowding one another to the shores of the Bengal Sea. And then, as if to give color to the supersition of the hillman long since gone with his tribe to the land where shadows fall deeper than those cast by the teak tree in the jungle, out of these emblems of strength has grown a weakness that has overthrown a nation.

The first oak of Burmah to be felled by a white man was symbolic of the nation's fall, and when the visitor to Mandalay is shown the king's palace, and reads the inscription on one side of a [illegible] King Thebaw sat in this opening with his two queens and his queen mothers when he gave himself up to General Prendergast on the 30th day of November, 1885," if he cares to continue the fancy he will notice that on each side of this opening the oak carvings are broken and refaced as if the events which changed a dynasty had leaned upon the teakwood and it had fallen beneath the weight.—The Century for October.

TO A COLLEGE TEAPOT.

Framed of coarse and common delf,
Bruised and battered as myself,
Naught could win thee from thy shelf—
  Not the wealth of nations.
Cracked thy lid, thy handle bent,
Yet I love each dimpling dent.
Every flaw is eloquent
  Of old associations.

Thou recallest the merry quips,
Cherry voices, laughing lips,
Muttered epigrams from gyps
  After the teausaking.
Once again, as oft of yore,
I can hear outside my door,
Pitched in cupboard or on the floor,
  Sounds of calm-breaking.

In thy rugged urn I trace
Many an old familiar face—
Friends now gone, to whom life's race
  Was but a merry canter.
Pass before my eager view,
As when we drank thy nect'rous dew,
Quam tempora mutantur!

Each dear friend of other days
Smiles upon me through the haze;
Then before my wistful gaze
  Fades, but not forever.
I have thee my lot to share,
Thou canst bid him here repair
Friendly, faithful, earthenware,
  Death only us shall sever!

—Pall Mall Gazette.

"CHEER, BOYS, CHEER."

A Talk With Mr. Henry Russell—Memories of Celebrities.

The old familiar song brings to our ear the name of Mr. Henry Russell, who gave it, and a dozen others, enduring melody. Who can say how much more sweetly the world has gone round for "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," or "A Life on the Ocean Wave," or "There's a Good Time Coming?" Hearing that Mr. Henry Russell was preparing his reminiscences, I went to him (a Chronicle interviewer writes) to see if he would not give me a taste of them. He is eighty-two, but as bright as the staves from favourite airs which he played to me on the piano.

"Altogether," he told me, "I have during my life made, I believe, the music for about 800 songs. I would get an idea for a song, and the music to express that idea would grow in my mind. Then I would go to my friend, Charles Mackay, or somebody else, explain the notion, run over the music, and say, 'Now give me words for that.'

"Charles Mackay wrote the words of 'Cheer, Boys, Cheer,' on my suggestion in sold tune and words for 10s. Not an extravagant sum, was it, for a song which has taken such a position? But as time then went with us a guinea was a lot to get for a song and music, and I don't know that we were always able to get one when we wanted it.

"Charles Mackay supplied the words of 'There's a Good Time Coming,' while 'The Ivy Green' was taken from Dickens, and 'The Old Arm-Chair' from Eliza Cook. Eliza Cook I knew very well, and a most winning creature she was. Dickens I was acquainted with intimately, and he was a singularly genial man, with the characteristic that he talked but little when in society. He was as quiet as a baby then—did not care to talk. Once, I remember, when I was to give a concert at the Lyceum, I went beforehand to see that everything was ready. Dickens walked in and found me pacing up and down the stage in no very genial humor. 'What's the matter?' he asked. 'Oh,' I said, 'there's a man Smith who has been singing my songs, and I have written to him saying that if the songs are worthy of his acceptance they are worthy of his acknowledgement.' 'Look here, Russell,' Dickens commented drily, 'there isn't a man living but has a Smith on his back.'"

"Your name and fame, I have heard, found you among the remarkable people Lady Blessington was in the habit of entertaining at her historic house in Kensington.

"Yes, I was at her 'at home' on different occasions, and I can say that I never met a more fascinating woman. She was aristocratic-looking, had a face with a benign expression—one of those faces which linger with you—and simply bubbled over with brilliance.

"Thackeray I first met when he was living in Palace Gardens, Bayswater, and he struck me as a very amiable gentleman, but he could be very satirical when he liked. A notable characteristic of Bulwer Lytton, to whom I introduced the great pianist Herta, was that he liked a company in which he happened to be to know that he was there. He had a thoroughly good sense of his own importance, but was an altogether attractive personality. Landseer and Cattermole and Mark Lemon I was something of, and I was chorus-master at Her Majesty's Theatre—that in the Haymarket, just pulled down, you know—when Taglioni danced and Jenny Ling sang there."

Terrible Disaster.

Grenada, Nicaragua, Oct. 9.—A terrible catastrophe has occurred here. The military barracks have been blown up and a whole quarter of the city has been badly damaged. The number of dead is estimated at two hundred. The number of wounded is much greater, but no exact estimate is obtainable.

Miscellany.

Dr. Jules Rochard, in the Union Medicale, draws a gloomy picture of the increase of the morphine habit in France and elsewhere. The habit, he finds, becomes incurable at the end of six months of indulgence. Women and doctors are, in his opinion, most deeply addicted to the drug.

Isaak Walton, the author of "The Complete Angler," is, after being dead for more than 200 years, to have a memorial at last. Walton was a Suffolk man, but he passed a great part of his life in London, living, among other places, in the parish of St. Dunstan's, Fleet street. It is therefore thought more suitable that the memorial should be placed in St. Dunstan's church.

Emperor William's action in reducing the term of obligatory service in the German army from three to two years has had the unexpected effect of diminishing not only [illegible] the average of disciplinary punishments inflicted. Investigation has shown that most of the suicides used to take place in the third year of service with the colours, and that nearly all of the more serious offences against the regulations were committed by third-year men.—New York Tribune.

The following anecdote is told of an Ontario priest. He announced the necessity of building a new church. The Sunday following he read out the subscription list: "John Smith, $1; Thos. Sweeny, $1, two dollars. I'll read the list again next Sunday." For several Sundays he read the same list. Then a generous Protestant gave him $5. The next Sunday he announced as follows: John Smith, $1; Thos. Sweeny, $1; John Jones, a Protestant, $5, seven dollars. My dear brethren, this church is going to be built. It remains to be seen whether it will be a Protestant church or a Catholic church. I'll read the list again next Sunday." The church is long since completed, and is a Catholic church.—Catholic Register.

Mr. T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers street, New York, says that Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured him of a dry and scaly humor, from which he had suffered intolerably. He adds, "I have not now a blemish on my body, and my cure is wholly due to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

A COLONIST FEAT.

Many people have attempted the feat of blowing hot and blowing cold at the same time, but few have been so successful as the Colonist was this morning. In one editorial article, under the title, "Britain Still Ahead," it shows how good a thing is free trade, and in another, entitled "McKinley Triumphant," it sings the praises of protection. The testimony in favor of free trade for Great Britain furnished in the former article is quite striking, and we therefore take the liberty of quoting:

> The trade prospects of Great Britain are cheering. At the last meeting of the associated chambers of commerce President Rollit showed that the croakings that had been heard of the decline of British trade and of the failure of British manufacturers to compete with those of other nations, were altogether groundless. To prove that in commerce Great Britain was holding her own, and something more, he instanced the traffic through the Suez canal. Of the 3082 vessels that passed through that canal in 1893 2262 were British, 260 German, 174 Dutch and 160 French. The American vessels were so few that they do not appear to be worth mentioning. A glance at the above figures shows that the British ships exceeded those of all the rest of the world by 1442. The British ships passing through the canal numbered 2262 and those of all other nations only 820. This places the commercial supremacy of the British empire in a very strong light.

The Colonist then reproduces from Bradstreet's this suggestive comment on the address of President Rollit: "That the relative commercial progress of countries competing with Great Britain, not only Germany, but France and the United States, was greater than that of the former, was an allegation often made and accepted, but one which very careful investigation decidedly discredited. Outside Europe there could be no question as to the continuance of the great preponderance of the trade of the United Kingdom, which, in the case of colonies and dependencies, was not only overwhelming but increasing. The prevailing impression that German or any other business had been gaining ground everywhere at the expense of British trade appears by a recent report to be erroneous, the probability being that the repetition of particular facts from various places as to German competition, while the larger trades were not reported upon, might be responsible for the fear that the trade of the United Kingdom was giving way at every point, whereas the contrary was the fact." Our neighbor concludes by thus moralizing:

> There are Canadians who are ready to give circulation to every gloomy report and every nonsensical theory with respect to the alleged declination of British commerce. We have no sympathy with such persons no matter what their object may be. We are proud to find our mother country still keeping her position in the commerce of the world and to see that she is likely to retain her supremacy.
> The only Canadians who have talked about declination of British commerce are the protectionists, who now and again make a few assertions in this line with the idea of discrediting free trade. If we are not mistaken the Colonist itself has committed the offence which it now condemns. However that may be, it is passing strange to find the article from which we have quoted followed at a short interval by a shout for McKinley and protection. The Colonist's second article closes with this paragraph:

> The free traders of Canada, or we are greatly mistaken, are destined to have as rude an awakening as the tariff reformers of the United States. They will find that the clamor made by a few enthusiasts and deluded trading politicians is not the voice of the people. Sixteen years ago this Dominion declared in favor of protection, and there is nothing to show that the majority of its inhabitants have changed their minds.

The Colonist's readers must have been greatly mystified by the variance in tone, and we are unfortunately unable to aid them in solving the mystery. If they think over the matter they will see, however, that it will be well for Canada to follow the mother country's example and adopt the system which the Colonist shows has done so much for her rather than continue to follow after the strange god of McKinleyism.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Winnipeg Free Press: Montreal banks have so much money in their vaults, for which safe investment cannot be found, that a reduction of the rates of interests on deposits has been made. Perhaps a still further reduction might cause depositors to withdarw their funds and go into business.

Says the Hamilton Spectator: "That Laurier's meetings were well attended is most likely true; but that any one who went to one of his meetings a Tory went away a Grit is simply ridiculous." Ridiculous as it may seem in the Spectator's eyes, that same result attended more than one of Mr. Laurier's meetings in British Columbia. It is a fact of which a good many people in this province have personal knowledge.

The Ontario government recently purchased a diamond drill for the purpose of exploring and testing mining lands in that province, with a view to assisting in the development of the mining industry. When the drill reached Toronto it of course went into the hands of the customs people, as it came from abroad. After a detention of six weeks and the payment of $350 duty the drill was released. This is the Dominion government's way of assisting the mining industry.

The government organ reads the Times a lecture on courtesy, because we ventured to express plainly our opinion on the old and the new commissioners of lands and works. We feel obliged to our neighbor and are always glad to see such lectures in its columns, since it is only on such occasions that any acknowledgement of the possible existence of courtesy is to be found therein. But we are afraid that the organ in this case confounds "courtesy" with "sycophancy." We beg leave to remind it that the Times is not an organ, and therefore does not feel constrained to suppress its true opinion of the retiring chief commissioner or his successor, or to indulge in any hypocritical or fulsome praise. That sort of distasteful work we are glad to leave to creatures of the Colonist stamp.

FUN WITH SEA TURTLES.

An Old Captain's Yarn of the Myriads Found Near Hatteras.

"I am reminded," said an old coasting captain, "of an experience I once had with sea turtles on the edge of the Gulf Stream, about sixty miles from Hatteras. I was part owner and commander of the Mary Lyle at that time and was coming up from Savannah with a half cargo of rice, when one morning the lookout yelled to me to come up on deck and lok at the sea turtles. When I got up and looked over the rail the whole ocean as far as I could see ahead of us was covered with turtles. They were tremendous fellows and were paddling along lazily in the opposite direction to that in which we were going.

> It didn't take us long to rig up a windlass and tackle and begin pulling some of the old fellows aboard. We picked the biggest as they came, and in the course of three hours we had gathered 26, about all that we could handily dispose of about the ship. Only nine of them lived until we reached New York, and we sold them for good prices. The shell of one that weighed 270 pounds is now in front of an eating house on Houston street, New York. I would hate to say how many turtles were in sight of the Mary Lyle that day for fear somebody might say I was fish yarning, but they came by us steadily for five hours, and when we got well into the school it extended as far as the eye could reach on all sides, and there was a turtle to about every forty square feet of water, and I didn't see one that weighed less than 150 pounds."—Washington Star.

VICTIM OF HIS OWN JOKE.

He Wanted to See Himself Die and Was Accommodated.

One of the oddest characters that Chicago has known was a blythe fellow named Horn. They called him "Pink" Horn. He boasted that he could not keep money; he declared that as he was a horn he must needs "blow" himself. It was a joke that allured him from his trade, that of sign painting. After this he lived on his wits. He was not known to be dishonest, but to the man who lives by his wits there come but few twinges of conscience. Once he made a reputation in a new direction. One cold day he took off a new overcoat and wrapped it about the shoulders of a thinly-clad negro woman whom he met on the street. His companions marvelled at this, knowing that he had but little money, and in reply to their expressions of surprise, he remarked:

"My father was a slave owner before the war, and an old black mammy brought me up."

He always wore a flower on his coat, and when the flower was a wilted one his acquaintances knew that he was hungry. He was a man of courage. Once in a playful mood, he fought "Black Jack," the commander of the bumboat, and defeated him, and this was no easy matter. His great fad was to investigate everything, and in this respect he became strangely curious toward the last. He had a mania for looking into the eyes of a dying man, and often hung about the hospitals. He used to say he intended to see himself die. Some of his friends said that he was losing his mind.

Well, hard luck came and he drifted away.

He went south and then into the far west. But he found no place to interest him. In Deadwood he did all sorts of odd jobs, striving to get back to Chicago. He said that he had but a short while longer to live, and that it would embarrass him to die away from home. He came back and stood upon the corners looking for his friends, but he found them not. No one knew him.

"Why, you must have heard of me," he said to a man. "I am Pink Horn."

"Never heard of you, sir."

"Why, I was here before the fire."

"That may be, but I never heard of you."

"Didn't you ever hear of the sport who took off his overcoat one blizzardy day and gave it to a black woman?"

"Oh, yes, I believe I did hear of that. So you are the man? Well, see you again. So long."

No one cared to talk to him. He strove to joke but his merriment was ghastly.

One night last week they took him up and carried him to the hospital, and this is the story they tell. He had been in bed two days when a physician told him he had but a few hours to live.

"Are you sure?" he asked.

"I am certain. If you have any arrangements to make you had better make them."

"My lungs are about gone, I suppose."

"Yes, practically."

"Will you do me a favor?"

"Surely, what is it?"

"Well, I want to see myself die."

"I don't understand you."

"I simply want to see how I look while dying. Prop me up and put a mirror at the foot of the bed."

"Oh, that would be—"

"You said you would do me a favor."

"And I will."

The doctor propped him up and the nurse brought a mirror and placed it where he could gaze into it. And so they left him for a time. He said that he desired to be alone. When they came back he was dead. His gaze was wide and his glassy eyes mirrored the mirror. Wanted to see himself die! He was an odd character.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

AN EXPENSIVE LIGHT.

Inveterate smokers acknowledge the habit is a most expensive one, but it is seldom that a light for a cigar costs a smoker a fortune, as in the story told by the author of Glances Back Through Seventy Years. He was an inveterate smoker, having contracted a "diseased habit of puffing away at a cigar every moment he was not eating or sleeping." He smoked only the very best brands, and in those careless days spent, as he says, more for cigars than it afterwards cost him to live.

He says: Well, one afternoon I had been to a prize cattle show at Chelmsford and then to dinner with the royal agricultural society, and on arriving in town by the last train, as I was walking homewards, my cigar unfortunately went out, and, much to my annoyance, I discovered that I had no fusees with me. The streets, too, were deserted, so that there was nobody from whom a light could be obtained.

On descending Ludgate hill I noticed that the glass of the gas lamp perched high against the wall just within Bell Sauvage yard was broken. There being a slanting ledge at the lower part of this wall, I placed my foot on it, and springing up I succeeded in lighting a paper spill which I had improvised, but in my rapid descent one of my feet unluckily caught the edge of the curb, and I dislocated my ankle and broke the small bone of my leg.

Quick as thought I wrenched the ankle in its place again, but it was not so easy to unite the ends of two fractured pieces of bone, so I hopped to a neighboring post and there awaited the protecting peeler's periodic round.

He came at last and charitably put me in a cab and accompanied me home. I was carried upstairs, a surgeon was sent for and the broken limb was set. Then I was put to bed and told I should have to remain there a month or more.

It was while I was fretting in this involuntary confinement that my partner in Palmer's Life paid me a sympathetic visit and bought me out of the speculation for a mere song.

Owing to this circumstance I have always reckoned that the going out of my cigar cost me about 1500 pounds, which actuaries tell me would, with compound interest added, amount to 6000 pounds at this date.—Tit Bits.

The Paris Figaro states that the daughters of the Czar receive annually 35,000 rubles till they are of age; thereupon, until their marriage, 50,000. The princes receive 33,000 till of age, then 150,000, besides a gift of 1,000,000 rubles, and at their marriage another gift of 200,000.

The study of Japanese fans is regarded, in Mrs. Chalotte M. Salway's book on the subject, as substantially the study of the history, religion, etiquette, daily manners and customs, peace and war, trade, games and literature, in fact, of the whole civilization and art of the country. From the sixth century downwards, fans were a part of the national costume. Every fan belonging to every rank had its meaning, and was used in its own particular way, according to a strict code of etiquette. The flat fan, or uchiwa, was introduced into Japan by the Chinese, and has been made in different shapes and used in many different ways. The cheapest and most usual forms are common objects in the west. One of its most curious varieties is the iron war fan, invented in the eleventh century for the use of military commanders, either for direction and signalling, or as a shield for defence. It is made of leather and iron. The water fans are made of bamboo and thinly lacquered, so that they may be dipped in water to secure extra coolness while fanning.—Popular Science Monthly.

The ex-Empress Eugenie has never been popular in England. She is generally disliked, partly because she is thought to be a fanatical Roman Catholic and partly because she is believed to have driven her son, the Prince Imperial, to self-banishment and death by her harsh treatment of him. This charge against her is distinctly made in Comte Maurice d'Herisson's book, "The Prince Imperial, Napoleon IV.," published in Paris. He says: "The Prince Imperial's life at Chiselhurst was a hell. After his father's death all persons that had been devoted to the Emperor and the young Prince were dismissed; the Empress Eugene refused to notice that her son was no longer a child, and treated him accordingly. The stipend allowed him was ridiculously small, so he was forced constantly to borrow from his companions. His letters had to pass through the mother's and the governor's hands before they were delivered with sneering remarks; in short, the young man was humiliated by his mother and her servants constantly and in every way possible. Can it be wondered at that his manly soul revolted at this treatment and sought emancipation at all hazards? He had suffered too much; he had been too often humiliated."—New York Tribune.

He was, as usual, remanded for another week and ordered back to the custody of the police. The officer from Australia is expected here on the steamship Arawa, due in a few days. Bollman takes his confinement quietly. He is a little paler and less inclined to talk than when arrested. He spends nearly all of his time in reading, but when the cells are over-crowded and prisoners are placed upstairs he mingles with them and talks to them.

—The Y. P. S. of C. E. gave a very interesting social at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last night. The hall was very prettily decorated and looked very attractive. The programme was as follows: Piano solo, Miss Brown; recitation, Mrs. Walt; vocal solo, Miss Duffie; recitation, Miss Speers; piano solo, Mr. Claud McMicking; intermission; collection; piano solo, Miss Lawrie; club swinging, Miss M. Murray; vocal solo, Mrs. Turnbull; recitation, Mr. Maiwick; vocal solo, Mr. Collister; and "God Save the Queen." It is probable that a literary branch of the society will be organized shortly.

—W. B. Hopkins, a waiter at the Arlington restaurant on South Third street, was married by Judge Glasgow last evening in the police court room to Miss Buland, a domestic, from Victoria, B. C., under circumstances that are termed "shotgun persuasion," says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. Miss Buland and her brother sought Captain Hogle's advice late in the afternoon, and in a short time Officer Williams and the captain took Hopkins to headquarters from the restaurant. He said he would marry the girl, so Detective Wells accompanied him to the county auditor's office, where Deputy Beeman made out the license. Judge Glasgow performed the ceremony, after which Clerk Crawford went out and purchased a box of cigars. The "happy man" wanted to know if they were satisfied, meaning the brother and the girl, and walked out of the room, followed by Mrs. Hopkins.

—The four-masted ship Lauriston, after being in dry dock having her hull painted, has been taken up to the head of Esquimalt harbor and laid up, waiting for a charter.

—N. P. Snowden has purchased a ranch at Saanich, comprising some one hundred odd acres, and is having extensive clearing and improving work done. Next spring he will have a residence built on the property as it is his intention to live there.

—A notary public will be at the Times office from 7.30 until 9 o'clock this evening to register voters. After this week it will be impossible to get on the list. A notary will also be present at Redding's store, corner Edward and Catherine streets, Victoria West, at 7.30 this evening.

—The steamer Walla Walla sails for San Francisco this evening. The following cabin passengers go from Victoria: Mrs. Goldfinch, Miss Delacour, Miss Sidebotham, Miss Alcock, Mrs. Urquhart and children, William Caldwell, A. J. Lloyd and Miss V. Ashton.

—The remark of Assistant Secretary Hamlin the other day to the effect that he would recommend an increase of the treasury department officials on the Pacific coast, including Alaska, may be better understood when he stated that he saw when at Juneau, notwithstanding the laws prohibiting the sale of liquors in the territory, five saloons open and all doing a thriving business. The force of officials, he contends, is entirely too small to enforce the laws at present in effect. It is almost impossible to prevent the importation of liquor into Alaska, and harder still to prevent the manufacture of illicit whiskey.—Washington City Special.

—The Hebrews of the city are to-day observing the Day of Atonement. Services were held at the synagogue last evening and all day to-day. The American Hebrew News, of Portland, says that the great Day of Atonement is the only fast day prescribed in the Pentateuch, and the idea is that of "covering over" sin. The gates of repentance are always open, but once every year, on the Day of Atonement, there was an impressive representation of the putting away of sin by means of propitiation. At the present time the observance of the day is preceded by forty days in which every morning and evening trumpets are blown throughout the world wherever there are non-reformed Jewish communities.

—Judge Herbert Gaston, a former resident of Victoria, died in Seattle on Wednesday, Oct. 3, aged about 63 years. Judge Gaston was a native of Georgia and landed in San Francisco in 1849, where he resided until early in the sixties, when he came north and for many years made Victoria his headquarters. He then went to Colorado and later returning to this coast located in Seattle, where he practiced his profession. Judge Gaston will be remembered by th older residents of Victoria as a man among men, a man who possessed all the qualities of a polished southern gentleman. To know him was but to respect him, and his friends were legion. He leaves a sister, who lives in Oregon, and is his sole surving relative.

—In the police court yesterday afternoon George and Ucum, the two Indians who assaulted John McCabe, were committed for trial at the fall assizes and bail was fixed at $250 in each case. S. Perry Mills, who appeared for the accused, reserved his defence. Last night the friends of the Indians paid into court $500 in cash and the prisoners were released. In the police court this morning Mr. Mills was present, accompanied by Captain William Cox, who retained him to defend the Indians, and made a statement. He said he believed he should have been present when the men were admitted to bail, as they were under the impression that it was a fine and did not now believe that they had to appear again. He disclaimed any connection with the settlement of any case in that [illegible] opinion that the bail bond was the correct one to draw to insure the appearance of the Indians when wanted. Chief Sheppard said that the Indians were told through an interpreter that they must be in the supreme court on November 20.

The sealers Amoke and Beatrice were reported in the straits yesterday, but up to this afternoon they had not arrived. The wind is very light in the straits.

—In St. Paul's church, Victoria West, by the Rev. D. MacRae, assisted by the Rev. R. G. MacGill, this afternoon, Mr. William George De Rousie and Miss Eliza Jane Scafe, daughter of Mr. John Scafe, were united in marriage. This being the first marriage service in the church the bride was presented with the customary family Bible by the pastor. Mr. and Mrs. De Rousie will make their home in the Highland district.

Falconer, jams, pickles and sauces, 383, $25; Okell-Morris Fruit Preserving Company, 266, $20, and Brackman & Ker Milling Company, 154, $15. The next in order and very close to the fourth, was Mrs. J. H. Brownlee's exhibit of home made preserves, which the association highly commended.

—Samuel S. Hyams, an old resident of the city, died last night after a long illness. He was a native of England, aged 53 years, and came to British Columbia in 1858. He afterwards went to the old country and again came to America. He engaged in business in New York, Boston and elsewhere and came to Victoria again ten years ago. He has been in business here ever since. He leaves a widow and a daughter in Victoria, a daughter in Chicago, and relations in different parts of the United States.

—The Epworth League of Metropolitan Methodist church will give a social at the Y. M. C. A. this evening. It is to be given to the members of the Y.M. C. A., and the entertainment to be provided will be as follows: Piano duet, Misses Davey; recitation, Miss Mona Clowe; vocal solo, Mr. Wheeler; recitation, Miss Johnson; vocal solo, Miss Anderson; vocal duet, Misses Wilson; intermission; piano solo, Miss Leech; reading, Mr. Weeks; solo, Mr. Richardson; recitation, Miss Strachan; vocal solo, Mr. Wheeler.

—The United States steamer Albatross arrived at the outer wharf to-day, and will make a short stay. She is on her way to San Francisco from the Sound, where she arrived a few days ago from Alaska. The Albatross is at the disposal and in the service of the United States fish commission, and with a corps of scientists aboard is usually engaged in making fishery investigations. She is equipped with all manner of curious devices for submarine research. However this year she was pressed into service as a patrol vessel and has been there since spring.

—Hon. Mr. Justice Crease, local judge in admiralty, this afternoon gave judgment in the case of the Yosemite vs. tug Vancouver. This was an action arising out of a collision between the two vessels. The Yosemite was trying to make her landing while the tug was moored to a bark she had been towing, but was at anchor just then. There was no lookout on board the tug, and besides she carried only a small light. The judge ordered the value of the damage done to the Vancouver to be ascertained and borne equally between the two vessels. Mr. P. AE. Irving (Bodwell & Irving) for the Yosemite, and Belyea & Gregory for the Vancouver.

—The sealers returning from Behring Sea say that the American Sea otter schooners entering the sea this year were permitted to carry shot guns. They might not have killed any seals but they certainly had the opportunity to do so and could have easily avoided the patrol by cacheing their skins at different points. Even assuming that no seals were shot it is regarded as unjust to make one rule for vessels flying the British flag and another for the American schooners. The sealers say that any British schooner going into the sea for any purpose and found with firearms aboard would have been ordered out if not seized. It is likely that some report on the matter will be made to Ottawa.

HARVEST HOME CONCERT.

Large Attendance at the Metropolitan Methodist Church.

The annual banquet and harvest home concert of the ladies' aid society of the Metropolitan Methodist church was held last evening. The large school room was used for the supper, being tastefully decorated and the tables literally groaning under the weight of appetizing edibles, which were duly discussed and rapidly disappeared aided by a multitude of mouths. At the concert held in the church "Love's Old Sweet Song" was sung by Miss Honour; a recitation by Miss Strachan, whose diction is clear and defined; song, "At the Mercy of the Waves," written, composed and sung by Mr. W. E. Buck, who was twice recalled for his fine rendering of the same; ballad, "Lads in Blue," by Master Reid, the sweet interpretation of which was awarded an encore; a humorous reading by Rev. S. Cleaver followed, to the evident enjoyment of all; then Mr. Killing sang Balfe's "Then you'll Remember Me," in a pure tenor voice and a style that gave every evidence of future success, also eliciting an encore; "Adieu, Marie," in the hands of Miss Jamieson, an old favorite in this church, brought out loud and continued applause, when she responded with a Scotch ballad. "God Save the Queen," heartily sung, brought a highly entertaining event to a fitting close. Mr. Buck acted as musical director and Rev. Mr. Cleaver as chairman. Mrs. Drury was a most efficient accompanist.

Good Spirits
And good savings, too, if you remember that Partridge of the Lansdowne House, 86 Yates street, is selling his capes, jackets, ulsters and waterproofs at reduced prices as he needs the room for the millinery department now in charge of Miss E. J. Duffs, late of the Stanley House.

INDIAN PROVERBS.

I.

India being an agricultural country, and the town life of the present day, of modern growth; there are a great many sayings relating to animals that have been coined by men who lived among them and who felt in a way that Europeans can hardly understand, that only a very thin line divided them from their world. The Hindoo theory of transmigration, as it is well known includes the belief that human souls may pass into animals, and the sacredness that attaches even to the lowest forms of life, have been factors that have helped to bring the genus homo into sympathy with the four-footed race. Many of these sayings are familiar to all classes of the natives, and are culled from various sources as well as from the writer's memory.

The elephant claims chief attention, and many of the proverbs referring to him have arisen owing to his being domesticated, and subjected to take part not only in state pageantry but in work which falls to the lot of a beast of burden. A saying that is found in many Indian languages is, "The elephant has one set of teeth for eating and one set for show." His tusks are treated as teeth and he is thus made to exemplify the person who has one sort of behavior for the public and another sort which is natural to him; in other words, he typifies the dissembler. It is also expressed in this way—"to have teeth like an elephant" and refers to the same kind of hypocritical behavior. His tusks are spoken of in another proverb to illustrate the reliance that may be placed on the word of a truly great man "An 'elephant's tusks are not taken back." He does not show them and then draw them back into his mouth, neither does a great man give a promise and then withdraw from it: he does not break his word. The size of the elephant compared with his tail has given rise to more than one saying. "If the elephant is gone, who is annoyed because his tail is also gone?" If a man has suffered a very heavy misfortune he does not worry about the most trifling part of it. The saying could also be applied to one whose house had been completely ransacked and robbed, and its owner was groaning because they had taken his walking stick! The same figure is used to express the completion of any large undertaking with the exception of an insignificant part of it—"The elephant has gone only his tail is left," a mere trifling part of the work remains to be done; or, put in another way, it describes the undertaking as being almost finished when a mishap occurred which bids fair to mar the whole. "The elephant was going, but was caught by the tail." Another simple saying that requires little explanation—"Only an elephant can bear an elephant's load," only a great man can do a great man's work; although it might be used by a man in very weak health, overwhelmed by trouble or care, to express his inability to bear the burden laid upon him. When one wishes to express a matter that is insignificant and altogether insufficient for the purpose, it may be done in the following words: "A peppercorn in the tooth of an elephant." It would require a good many peppercorns, or rather something much more substantial to satisfy the elephant's hunger. The English idiom, "a drop in the ocean," has very much the same meaning. An elephant is an animal that one respects; or perhaps respect is not quite the word, it is awe that is felt when he is near. He is such a huge brute, his tread on one's toes would not be very pleasant, so most people are only too ready to stand aside and show him deference. This fear of him has led to a saying, "Who would call an elephant a rover?" "Who would be so foolhardy as to call him names?" This applies to any great or influential person. Who would call him names? Does not everyone try to please him? If any act of folly on his part become known, how ingeniously it is explained away, or the noble offender forgiven. A similar and very sensible saying is—"Don't butt with an elephant." The illustration is charming, because the elephant may be figurative of so much: of going to law, which is very much the same thing as butting one's head against a blind justice cut in stone; or of quarreling with an employer, commonly called "quarrelling with one's bread and butter," an occupation in which the subordinates always come off second best. "To butt with an elephant" may suggest many phases of conduct, but it is, as those who have tried it know, a foolish thing to do. It reminds one of that old English saying, "Blow not against the hurricane." "An elephant's footprints are the largest of all footprints, and, in another form, "The footprints of all animals are included in those of the elephant," are sayings that illustrate the relation between a superior and his subordinate.

The ignominy of failure or the praise of success in any undertaking goes to the chief, not to his helpers. For example, in erecting a magnificent building we do not speak of the laborers, but of the architect as having done it; in battle it is not the rank and file, but the general who wins or loses. "A head to conceive" is ever counted of more honor than "a hand to execute."

You often hear the elephant and the ant spoken of together in these old sayings, the contrast between them is so great. There is a proverb that applies to those inconsistent people who will one minute overlook a serious fault and the next make a great fuss about a trifle. "Either an elephant may be lost and not be missed or an ant cannot go without being noticed." It is sometimes put in another form—"At one time even an elephant can go through, at another time, not even a needle can." Where such conduct prevails there is necessarily a good deal of injustice and mismanagement. The master who treats his servants or the employer who treats his workmen in this way, one day making a prolonged inquiry into a silly matter and the next laughing at what is really a grievous offence, will have these words quoted against him as an unjust master. Another true saying—"Illness comes with the steps of an elephant, but goes with the steps of an ant." It comes on so quickly, but it is so slow to go away. The sprain at football or tennis, to say nothing of the more weighty "ills that flesh is heir to," happen in a moment, but take weeks to get over. They come at a pace and with the weight of an elephant; they leave us slowly little by little. There is another saying, "Better be an ant and eat sugar than an elephant and chew wood," wood being figurative of hard substances like branches of trees. A humble man living in quietness is better off than a great man burdened with many cares. "Myriads of ants can feed on the crumbs of an elephant's meal" means, of course, that numbers of dependants hang about a rich man and find support on his leavings. There is a saying that illustrates to a nicety the difference between a man of truly noble character and those little minded beings who, while taking good care to keep out of harm's way, throw mud at him. "The elephant goes walking on; dogs bark." This is an apt description of the conduct of a good man going quietly on, his dignity undisturbed by the yelping of curs at his heels.

There is a good deal of satire lying beneath some of these sayings: they enable a man to express an unpleasant truth in figurative language which he could hardly venture to put in direct form. For instance—"The goat says put the elephant's trappings on me," which is a rap at conceit. Another saying like the foregoing is—"The dog says to the elephant, I will carry you across." The river is too deep for the elephant, but how kind of the dog to offer to carry him over! Some folk cannot see the ridiculousness of their conceit. "When an elephant has come as a guest the hare does its best to please him." There are such things as rich uncles or rich fathers-in-law in India as well as in other countries, so the poor relative strains his resources to the utmost to fitly entertain a visitor of this sort; the possibility of ultimate compensation is not to be lightly forfeited. "When an elephant becomes a saint even boys begin to prick him" has the same meaning as the English saying, "It is a base thing to tear a dead lion's beard off." Let a man lay aside his riches or his influence and give himself up to religion in the sense of becoming meek in his behavior and superstitions, and he will find that even the most despicable people, who before would have fallen at his feet, will abuse him. The eastern character cringes before power, but it has only scorn and abuse for weakness. Few truths are taught more clearly in Indian proverbs than the belief that "might is right," that the exercise or show of power is the correct way to deal with most men. Show but a scrap of authority, even if it be but a peon's belt, and it is instantly respected, but, alas! for that large mass who have neither power nor authority. This idea is sometimes expressed in another form—"When a tiger is entrapped in a cage women and children throw stones at him." Here is the same disposition to kick the man who is down.

Military Men Start Out to be Camp Followers.

Shanghai, Oct. 9.—Reports from Pekin say the government intend to largely increase the tax on goods transmitted to and from the interior, for the purpose of raising additional war funds. It is also reported that the viceroy has asked all the salt merchants to contribute to the war expenses. In this way it is expected that the 5,000,000 taels will be raised.

The latest reports of the Yalu naval battle report that assertions are made frequently that none of the Japanese vessels were lost, although several of them were badly damaged in the engagement. The report that the Japanese have landed in force at Port Arthur, is not confirmed. The British gunboat Redpole, which arrived here to-day from a cruise near Port Arthur, where the Japanese were reported to have landed, reports that there was no sign of Japanese in that quarter.

A second Japanese army is reported to have crossed the Yalu river and to be advancing upon Moukden. It is believed that the place will soon fall into the hands of the enemy. The Chinese troops there are said to be greatly demoralized.

It is reported that the reinforcements of marines for the British squadron in Chinese waters will go to their destination by way of the Canadian Pacific railway, which is considered the quickest route.

The Central News correspondent in Shanghai says that a steamer loaded with coal for the British warships at Chee Foo was stopped the other day by a Japanese cruiser, but was subsequently allowed to proceed. The British and German clubs in Tientsin have adopted concerted measures for the defence of the European residents. The volunteers are drilling steadily. Business in Tientsin is at a standstill. Stores of skins and hides from the interior are accumulating. The Viceroy works night and day, but keeps himself secluded. He has not been seen in the port since the recent Chinese reverses.

A despatch to the Central News from Tientsin says: "The British minister in Peking called at the Imperial palace yesterday and was granted a long and cordial audience by the Emperor."

The Times will publish to-morrow the following dispatch from its Tientsin correspondent: "Five thousand Russian troops are posted on the Corean frontier, facing a Japanese force at Hunchub. Assaults on foreigners in Pekin and its environs are increasing in frequency and gravity, as it has been always predicted must happen. Each minister, thinking to conciliate the government, leaves it to his colleagues to make protests, the results being plenary indulgence to street rowdies. For the same reason commercial rights are invaded with impunity. Serious troubles must follow unless the foreign agents deal firmly."

Rome, Oct. 9.—The Italian minister at Pekin has, in accordance with the instructions of the Italian government, addressed a note to China inviting pourparlers with Japan in an effort to bring about a termination of the war. In this endeavor the minister tendered his own offices. The General of the Jesuits has memorialized the Pope asking His Holiness to use his influence with the powers to the end of terminating the war.

The Italian government has decided to spend an additional $350,000 to complete the warships which have long been in course of construction. Another Italian cruiser, the "Cristoforo Colombo," has been ordered to Chee Foo. Among her officers is the Duke of Abruzzi, nephew of King Humbert.

Berlin, Oct. 9.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Kocluische Zeitung says that Russia has sent a strong force to her Asiatic frontier to prevent the further inroads of Chinese marauders. The force consists of five battalions of riflemen, two squadrons of Cossacks and three batteries.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—On the train for the Pacific coast were Capt. Duval and Capt. Cavendish, who are bound for the Orient; the former to be a camp follower of the Japanese troops and the other to follow the Chinese troops wherever they go. They are special military officers sent by the British government for each side, and will follow every movement and make reports on the facts and results. They have to take the chances of being shot or not. Japanese attache Du Bulay, who was also on board, said he would not mind being shot but did not want to fall into the hands of the Chinese, where his head would be sure to go.

"Only the Scars Remain,"

Says HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who certifies as follows:

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

Mother Urged Me

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Cures others, will cure you!

Nothing Strange.

Intelligent people, who realize the important part the blood holds in keeping the body in a normal condition, find nothing strange in the number of diseases Hood's Sarsaparilla is able to cure. So many troubles result from impure blood, the best way to treat it is through the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla vitalizes the blood.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.

Mr. Laurier addressed two thousand people at Brandon on Monday afternoon.

Fire gutted the gas house at Brampton, which had just been rebuilt after having been burned down last spring.

Mr. Mercier is stronger and more cheerful than before. His condition puzzles the doctors, who say he cannot live long.

Dairy Commissioner Robertson goes to Manitoba shortly to locate a number of stations which the Canadian Pacific railway company will build.

The Toronto trades and labor council to-night decided to exclude Patrons of Industry from membership in their body. The vote stood 13 to 12 in favor of the motion, but two-thirds was required.

Clarke Wallace has taken measures to offset the opposition in West York by appointing Ald. Bailey leader of the independent wing in that portion of the constituency lying within Toronto to a position in the customs.

W. H. Eaton & Co.'s stable with three horses, their large warehouse, Magnesson's stables and Pook's blacksmith shop at West Selkirk, Man., were destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at about $12,000, with no insurance.

It is reported in Montreal that owing to the extreme dulness of trade the Allan, Dominion and Beaver line steamship companies have decided to lay up this winter all their boats with the exception of those engaged in carrying the mails.

By a unanimous vote of the Toronto city council it was decided to request a judge of the county court to hold an investigation into the charges of boodling that have been made against certain aldermen in connection with the electric light tenders.

W. Kennedy, a Toronto painter, detected a strong smell of gas in his house and struck a match in order to find out the leak. Immediately a loud explosion occurred. Very little remains of Kennedy's hair and moustache, while his eyebrows and eyelashes are completely gone.

Cadet Flummer, of Toronto, who entered the military college at the beginning of the term, has left the institution for a second time, refusing to remain. The cause is said to be an attempt of the senior cadets to haze him. It is probable the college authorities will investigate the matter.

A. Tourangeau, postmaster of Quebec, died after a lingering illness. He was at one time mayor and also represented one of the divisions of Quebec in the house of commons. In politics he was a Conservative, but lost his seat at the elections which followed the advent to power of the Mackenzie-Dorion administration.

Changes are impending on the staff of the Winnipeg Nor'wester, the paper started by W. F. Luxton last spring. Luxton is to leave the paper at the end of the week, and his editorial writer, D. J. Beaton, has also resigned, as well as the business manager and one or two reporters. Col. Scoble is at present in charge, and it is said will run the paper as a Conservative organ. The paper has not been a financial success.

A few days ago the Montreal Herald published an article on Norman Murray and the sale of "Maria Monk." The rabid enemy of Roman Catholics visited the Herald office and charged the city editor, Mr. Burgess, with having spoiled the sale of the book by publishing the article mentioned. Mr. Burgess explained to Mr. Murray that he (Murray) had first been consulted, and stated that the sale of the book had practically been stopped. This Murray denied and called Burgess a liar. The latter, who is of the bantam class, but very active, immediately let go his right, knocking Murray down. The Scot came up again, but was once more sent to the earth. He now threatens to swear out a warrant against Burgess, but so far has not done so.

PROPAGATION OF SALMON.

The Experiment Proves Successful on the Columbia.

Deputy State Fish Commissioner Houchen reports the complete success of his experiment in propagating salmon in the lower waters of the Columbia. It was the opinion of United States Fish Commissioner McDonald, and others prominent in fish culture have held, that salmon would not spawn at the mouth of the Columbia, that they could not be transported alive to any tributary streams, and if they were they would kill themselves in trying to escape from confinement. Mr. Houchen built a dyke across the Chinook river and transported 117 live salmon taken from traps. Last week they began spawning and Mr. Houchen already has over six thousand eggs in hatching traps. The success of the experiment is attracting wide attention among salmon fishermen, as it solves the problem of salmon propagation in the Columbia. State Fish Commissioner Crawford, on a recent trip to the head waters of the Columbia, could find no point where the salmon were spawning in sufficient numbers to warrant the establishment of a state fish hatchery. The eggs secured at the mouth of the Columbia can be artificially propagated there until they reach the eye stage, when the can be transported in layers between cotton flannel to the head water, and there hatched out and the young fish freed. By so doing the young fish will return to the spawning grounds in the spring run, whereas if they are propagated and freed in the Chinook river they will form the fall run. The expense of the experiment was borne by Mr. Houchen and the trap fishermen of Ilwaco, who are jubilant over its success. They regard its success as an assurance both that salmon will become plentiful again and that their traps will remain, as it is only by traps that the fish can be secured alive for the hatchery.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

DANGERS TO FRUIT.

Woolly Aphis Found in Apple Cores—Need of Careful Inspection.

The Northwest Horticulturist says that the woolly aphis was recently found in the core of a Gravenstein apple, at Aberdeen, by Mr. C. C. Cushman. This gentleman says he examined a large number of different varieties of apples on the market there, shipped in from California, and found the core alive with this pest. It is claimed by horticulturists that this pest attacks the roots, trunks and branches of apple trees but does not affect the leaves or fruit. If this is a fact the codlin moth or some other pest must have preceded this one and vacated the premises, as the cores were all eaten away and no two pests found in the same apple. It was noticed that entrance was almost invariably at or near the blossom end of the fruit, occasionally on the stem end, and very seldom on the cheek of the apple, and these apertures were in most cases filled in and looked like worm holes. It is said the woolly aphis adheres to the sucking class of pests, therefore must have effected entrance through apertures previously made by some of the biting or boring class of pests. This aphis had apparently been in the apple some time and must have derived nourishment from the flesh of the fruit.

This shows how easily a clean orchard can become infested unknowingly, simply through carelessness, by permitting any part of any fruit shipped in from other localities to be thrown about the premises, and especially among orchard trees. This is one of the worst pests with which our fruit growers have to contend and is to the orchard what the smallpox is to the family and should be as cautiously handled. Our fruit growers ought to comply strictly with the rules of our board of horticulture, to use no package for fruit which has once been shipped in with fruit unless it has been thoroughly disinfected. The time for delivery of nursery stock for fall planting is drawing near, and all purchasers should accept only good, thrifty and healthy trees, with good roots and free from insect pests, and no others should be planted under any circumstances. All the buyers should imperatively demand a certificate of health from some one of our legally authorized state inspectors, and thus avoid running any risk of obtaining pest-ridden or diseased stock.—Tacoma Ledger.

WHALE CATCH A FAILURE.

Transportation of Reindeer from Siberia to Alaska.

San Francisco, Oct. 9.—Contrary to expectations, the sloop of war Mohican arrived at Unalaska yesterday. The Ranger reported that the machinery was out of order and that she would have to come down under sail. The only trouble was with her propeller, but the Mohican came down at half speed. Fair weather was experienced most of the way, but twice the sloop had to heave to, and once she had to run under bare poles. Captain Clark reports that nothing unusual happened during the trip. The run from Unalaska was made in a little over ten days. The Mohican brought the Mohican brought the patients from the whaling fleet and also considerable news. The men had to be taken off the revenue cutter Bear and they report that the spring catch was a failure. Some one said:

"The whales are no fools. Last season they were slaughtered off the mouth of the Mackenzie river. This year they have found a new feeding ground and next year the whalers will have to go on an exploring expedition. I think that the slaughter of last season has driven the whales away and that half the vessels now in the Arctic will come back empty."

The schooners Emilie Schroeder and the Silver Wave have been reported as total losses. They are not. Both schooners are high and dry on a sandy beach, and during the next high tides the chances are that they will float off. Captain Bain, of the Schroeder, did not lose any time, but established a land station at Port Hope. Taking his men and boats and all the running gear, he made a raid on the whales from the shore and did fairly well. I think that both the Schroeder and Silver Wave will be got off next spring.

There are a great number of desertions from the whaling fleet. The steamer Alexander was the most notable. Four men left her at St. Lawrence bay, four at Unalaska and one at Cape Lisburn. The latter went to work with Captain Bain, of the Emilie Schroeder, and when the Bear put in there he wanted Captain Healy to bring him to San Francisco.

"The captain refused, saying he was a deserter and not entitled to transportation in a United States ship. The Bear during the season brought over 150 reindeer from Siberia to Port Clarence. They bore the voyage from Cape Serdoze remarkably well and were landed in splendid condition. At Port Clarence they are a great success and are multiplying rapidly, but at Unalaska they are a failure. The climate suits them, but they cannot get used to the precipices and fissures. Last season over 200 came to their death by falling over the precipices and now the herd is reduced to about a dozen deer. At Port Clarence, however, they are thriving, and in a few years the government will not have to send provisions up each year to keep the natives alive."

The Bear brought 17,000 pounds of bone from the whaling fleet at Unalaska. It will be transferred to the steamer Bertha [illegible] will reach San Francisco in a few days.

ARTESIAN WELLS.

Two Remarkable Borings, One in Russia, the Other in England.

A writer in Chambers' Journal re-tells the story of the artesian well at Schneidemuhl, in Prussian Poland, which proved in the long run anything but a godsend to the burghers. The inhabitants were appalled at the magnitude of the force which they had summoned from the depths of the earth. The horror of flood began to stare them in the face. Nor were there wanting the presence of other and perhaps more disquieting phenomena. Earth tremors were frequent. Confused and mysterious subterranean rumblings were heard. The foundations of their houses sank; great cracks formed in the walls and many a dwelling house was hastily abandoned. After many alarming shocks and subsidences of the ground about the mouth of the well a violent moving of what might be termed the crater of the boring took place. Amidst the rush of the escaping water and the thunderous roar of the subsiding land, the whole boring and pumping plant disappeared from sight. Fortunately no loss of life took place. Soon the underground torrent once more made a way for itself, and the scene of the subsidence was speedily buried beneath a pond of water, in the centre of which the monster artesian foamed and bubbled.

At Bourn, in Lincolnshire, a well was sunk to supply the town of Spaulding, some ten miles away, with water. Such wells have been sunk in this district from time immemorial, and rejoice in the vernacular denomination of "blow holes." At a depth of 66 feet water impregnated with iron was encountered; but this chalybeate was excluded as the tubes were carried deeper. Some twelve feet lower the main spring was tapped, and the water rose very slowly up the tube. It was 24 hours before it overflowed. As the depth increased so did the volume of the ascending current; and by the time the well had reached a depth of 100 feet the outflow was 1300 gallons per minute, or 1,872,00 gallons per day. Although this was an enormous flow, the engineers thought that by going a little deeper a still larger supply would be available. In many instances, however, further boring has carried the well through the non-porous rock upon which the water bearing layer rests, thus allowing the water to escape. But with the Bourn well the deepening of the bore hole had the desired effect, for at the depth of 120 feet the outflow increased to 1800 gallons per minute, or no less than 2,592,000 gallons per day.

CRICKET.

ENGLISHMEN INVITED.

The Victoria Cricket Club met last evening and accepted the kind offer of Mr. C. W. Rhodes to arrange for a theatrical performance to replenish the club's exchequer, and they also decided to invite the "All England" team now playing in Australia to play a three days' match in Victoria on their way home.

WRESTLING.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Liverpool, Oct. 9.—Charles Donaldson, the champion Scotch wrestler, met McInerny in a catch-as-catch-can match last evening for a purse of £100 and the championship of Great Britain. The men were well matched and the bouts were highly exciting. McInerny won.

GOLF.

INTERNATIONAL MATCH.

A Tacoma dispatch says: "In about a week the golf players of Tacoma and Seattle will organize. A lot of clubs or sticks have been imported from Scotland, and the following are among those who will take a lively interest in the practice. Alexander Baillie, the Rev. Mr. Lydgate, Jesse Metcalf, James Gillison, Drs. Waughop and Redpath, of the Steilacoom asylum staff, and Mr. Rogers, the accountant of that institution. Alex Thompson and several Seattleites are also interested. The prairies in this vicinity are considered very desirable places for playing the game of golf, and when the Sound players become more proficient it is proposed to challenge the experts of British Columbia to an international contest."

THE RING.

AFTER THE FIGHT.

New York, Oct. 9.—There promises to be some spirited bidding between the Auditorium and Olympic clubs of New Orleans for the International battle between James J. Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons.

Both clubs want the contest and each is determined to get it at any cost. Captain Williams, who will represent the Auditorium club at the conference between Corbett and Fitzsimmons at the Herald office on Thursday, left New Orleans Sunday. Before leaving he wired a friend in this city to the effect that he is prepared to top in the way of a purse any that President Scholl may make in behalf of the Olympic club. He also said that he has in his possession a certified check for $25,000, which he will agree to deposit with any reputable sporting man or newspaper as a guarantee of the club's reliability, provided Corbett and Fitzsimmons sign the articles of agreement he hands them.

President Scholl wired a well-known New York man that he will leave New Orleans for this city to-day and be present at the meeting. He says he will bring with him the articles of agreement which Fitzsimmons signed immediately after he defeated Creedon. The articles call for a fight to a finish between Corbett and Fitzsimmons for a purse of $25,000. He will ask Corbett to sign. If the champion refuses to do so on the ground that the Auditorium club's offer is larger Mr. Scholl says he will go his rival one better. Mr. Scholl remarks that the Auditorium club will have to do some tall bidding to get the match.

BASEBALL.

GIANTS WIN.

New York, Oct. 8.—The Temple cup has been won by the Giants. Four well-contested games have been played for its possession, the final one at the polo grounds this afternoon. It is said the receipts for the four games amount to $25,000. Of this the Giants will get $16,000. As the expenses are not heavy each of the sixteen New York players will receive nearly $1,000. The Baltimores will have about $9,000 to be divided among the fourteen payers after their expenses are paid. There were 12,000 people present to-day. In the sixth inning Van Haltern met with an accident, which caused him to retire from the game. He collided with Jennings while trying to steal a base, and he was knocked into unconsciousness. When he recovered, his nose appeared to be broken, but later it was found to be only an abrasion. On account of darkness the game was ended in the eighth inning. Score:

New York	1 0 1 4 5 0 5 0 0—16

EASTERN PLAYERS.

New York, Oct. 10.—It leaked out yesterday that certain New York and Baltimore players agreed to equally divide their shares of the receipts from the Temple club games. From good authority it was learned that Doyle and Davis agreed to "whack up" with Keeler and McGraw, while Kelly, Brouthers and Gleason consented to a division with three other New York players. When Harry Von Dervorst of the Baltimore club learned this he said: "That convinces me that this whole Temple club business has been a farce and I shall offer a resolution at the coming league meeting that the trophy be returned to Mr. Temple with thanks. Instead of such a series, I think it would be better for the league to put up a purse of $10,000 of which $5,000 should go to the winners of the pennant; $3,000 to the second team and $2,000 to the third."

The national league magnates have begun to put their heads together. The many stories regarding the formation of the new national association are beginning to worry them and the inability of certain clubs to sign their players has caused the big moguls to take some decisive action. Accordingly notice has been quietly sent to the various clubs that a secret meeting of the league men will be held in this city to-day. Several of them were in town last night and talked things over in private. From a reliable source it was learned that the league has a body intended to issue a proclamation in a few days to the effect that all players signing with the new association would be expelled. It is also known that the league has had agents on the road investigating the truth of the various association stories, and endeavoring to sign players, and that the information gathered by these men warrants a conference at once. N. E. Young, H. H. Von Dervorst, C. H. Byrne, E. H. Talcott, Beach and Rogers Soden, Conant, the Wagners, and John T. Brush are among the prime movers in the leagues present stand and they are liable to be joined by the other magnates to-day or to-morrow.

COULD NOT DECIDE.

New Westminster, Oct. 10.—A meeting of the lacrosse club was held last night in reference to Victoria's offer to have the match played at the capital. The liberal proposition was favored by a majority, but a few protested so strongly against playing the final in Victoria and brought such heavy outside pressure to bear that no decision could be arrived at and the meeting adjourned until to-night.

THE WHEEL.

RECORD BROKEN.

New York, Oct. 8.—G. W. Wolfe, of Chicago, arrived here yesterday and dismounted in front of the City Hall, having wheeled all the way from Chicago, breaking the record between that city and New York by 1 hour and 13 minutes. He left Chicago on Monday morning at 5 o'clock, and he estimated he had ridden 1,038 miles since that time. His actual time from start to finish has been six days, 8 hours and 30 minutes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

W. H. Langley, on behalf of the subscribers last evening presented to the James Bay Athletic Association the new four-oared shell which recently arrived from England. Ven. Archdeacon Scriven, vice-president, received the shell on behalf of the association.

Elsworth, of Seattle, last evening defeated Latimer by 21 balls in the 150 ball match. They will play a series of games at the Delmonico, the management having offered a purse.

THE QUADRA'S TRIP.

Improved Navigation Marks Placed in Baynes Sound.

The Dominion steamer Quadra arrived in port this afternoon from Baynes Sound where she has been engaged for the last few days renewing the buoys and painting the beasons. Grassy Point beason has been rerected in the position the black spar buoy was moored in, on the extreme edge of the spit. The two small spar buoys marking the crossing over Kelp bar have been removed and two single pile beasons erected with slats of wood in the shape of a triangle on the head of each. These beasons are just northward of the crossing marks, and should be passed to the southward. Captain Walbran sounded over the crossing between the beasons and to a distance of one cable southward of each beason, and found no less than two fathoms when reduced to a mean low water. It is to be hoped these beacons will stand the winter gales, as they are a great improvement on the small spar buoys. The Quadra leaves in the morning to make a survey of Portlock Point as a lighthouse and fog station.

Higashi Honwanji is the name of a magnificent temple in course of erection in Kyoto, the old capital of Japan. For ten years it has been going on, and millions of dollars have been expended; and it is yet far from completion. The huge timbers used for pillars, frame, and rafters were hauled from the forests by cables made of women's hair! Twenty-nine such cables have been worn out, and twenty-four are yet unused. Evidently the old faith has still a strong hold on the body of the people, when the women make such a wonderful contribution for one of its temples.
